Australian History Summit update

Opening the HAA National Conference in Fremantle on Friday, 6th October, federal minister Julie Bishop made a significant speech. She affirmed her intention to push ahead with a 'model curriculum' in Australian History for students in Years 3-10 in all Australian schools. She also attacked existing syllabuses and curricula, referring to 'social engineers working away in State government education authorities' and 'ideologues who have hijacked school curriculum'. The next day, HTAA National Council responded by welcoming the federal government's interest in promoting Australian History in schools, repeating HTAA's willingness to be involved in the process, but criticizing Minister Bishop for her comments about state education department 'social engineers' and 'ideologues'.

The post-Summit working party chaired by Dr John Hirst had its final meeting on 31st October. The next stage now begins. A leading history educator has been appointed by the Minister to consult widely and to produce a framework/guidelines document that will inform the eventual writing of the 'model curriculum'. (The name of that person has not been publicly released by DEST but those in the know believe it's a sensible choice. The name should emerge soon, once the consultation process begins.)

QHTA members will be forgiven for thinking that QHTA has been rather quiet during the whole Summit process. To explain ... HTAA Council decided months ago that all HTA responses to the Summit process should be channeled through HTAA, to avoid conflicting and competing messages coming from the various state HTAs.

QHTA Executive has been busy however. The Executive had a special meeting to discuss and respond to the Summit and its aftermath. And QHTA convened a meeting of selected practicing teachers to produce a separate response. The reports of those two meetings have been sent to the state and federal Education ministers, Dr John Hirst and other interested parties. You can read both reports on the Sunshine Project website:
<https://olt.qut.edu.au/udf/SUNPRO/> That site also provides over 30 articles and reports related to the whole History Summit process.

Further, QHTA is combing with SOSEAQ, GTAQ, QETA, HENA and a collective of Australian historians to write to state minister Rod Welford, asking that he convene a Queensland Summit in April 2007 to discuss the whole issue of Australian History in schools. By April the report of the current consultation/framework process should be available for consideration.

2007 Modern History Student Seminars

In 2007 QHTA will again offer the very successful Modern History Student Seminars - with a difference. To make it easier for schools to attend, the seminars will be presented on four consecutive days in different parts of Brisbane, as well as on the Sunshine and Gold Coasts.

The four Brisbane seminars will be on Tuesday, 8 May - Friday, 11 May 2007. Three tentative venues are in central Brisbane, Bald Hills and Springfield. QHTA is seeking a fourth Brisbane venue, preferably in either the outer East (Carindale/Wynnum district) or outer South (Mt Gravatt/Springwood district). If you can offer your school please email Brian Hoepper b.hoepper@qut.edu.au. The venue needs to be a theatre with at least 200 seats and large-screen data projection. Schools make their venues available free of charge, but the school's students attend without any fee (saving also on transport costs).

To make it even easier for schools attending, the seminar sessions will be from 10am - 12.20pm on each day. This will eliminate the peak hour bus trip.

The Sunshine Coast and Gold Coast seminars are tentatively planned for the following week, possibly on Tuesday, 15 May and Thursday 17 May 2007.

More details will be circulated as soon as they are available.
